- The DevOps Conference takes place between November 20 and 23, 2017 in Munich.
- The conference features more than 45 sessions and keynotes held by international speakers and industry experts.

Berlin, 7/26/2017 – Modern DevOps does more than just bring together Devs and Ops. It aims to integrate business and IT across teams and systems. This is the mission of the DevOpsCon - the conference for agile processes, microservices, continuous delivery, container and cloud technologies. Those topics are essential to the current high performance IT transformation and the reason why the DevOpsCon is always a good place for learning and connecting.

The main conference takes place November 20 - 23, 2017 in Munich and offers a wide range of innovative tracks:

In the “Business & Company Culture track”, DevOps practitioners share their success stories and provide tips on how to kick-start your DevOps adoption while the “Cloud Platforms track” offers insight into the newest approaches to set up cloud-based or even cloud native applications – from AWS to Microsoft Azure, Google Cloud or Cloud Foundry to the newest trends towards serverless (FaaS) computing. An also well-known track is the “Container Technologies track” which provides use cases and best practices for working with Docker, Kubernetes & Co.

Further tracks are the “Continuous Delivery track” offering valuable practical knowledge on how to automate the software delivery and boost productivity and the “Logging, Monitoring & Analytics track”, which presents approaches to handle the complexity of microservices applications. The scope ranges from performance analytics, profiling and monitoring to log management for Docker, Swarm, Kubernetes & Co. Last but not least, there is the “Microservices track”, which will show the visitors what the asynchronous and serverless future holds.

But of course, this is just a little piece of the huge program. The DevOpsCon will give interested parties the possibility to meet well-known experts in innovative infrastructure and modern lean business culture. Insightful keynotes addressing actual trends and best practices, the Expo reception with top IT companies and a fantastic program are waiting for a curious audience.
